MISTAKE EXTRAORDINARY —A young gent had engaged our "elericus" to put him through an a preliminary matrimontal process, which he did in a manner perfecilly satisfactory to all parties. The blissful bridgeroom banded the "dominie" his fee wrapped up in a piece of paper, which he transferred to bis pocket, and left. Upon reaching home, his wife, according to custom, demanded her perquisites—it was passedover, and as the lady had just started on a shopping excursion it was thrust hurriedly into her reticule unopened. Dropping into a first-class dry-goods store in State street, she made a few minor purchases, and then resolved to induge herself in a uew shawl with that opportune marriage fee. A magnificent Broche was selected, and pronounced comme if fairly a poetical-looking clerk, as its gorgeous folds dropped gracefully about her form.

"FIII take it," said the lady, with a gracious state.

I'll take it," said the lady, with a gracious smile.
"Yes, mem; any 'hing else, inein?" said the atoresaid poetical cierk, as be leaned gracefully upon the tips of his hingers and bent inquiringly forward, after having nicely wrapped up the Broche.

Broche.

"How much is that?" inquired the lady, as she threw down the unfolded paper containing the fee, while she sought for her port monnaie.

"Yes'em," said the polite attendant, as he undid it with a polite smile, and then with intense terror read: "Brandreth's pills—cathartic—to refer the market by the m be taken nefore retiring. Mem .- eat no break fast?"
The lady's astonished gaze fell upon the opened paper, which revealed to her twelve largesized B andreth pills. The lady, at the sight of the incontinent package, fainted; the clerk went into hysterics, but came to when his corsets were indoosed. It is needless to add that the bridegroum discovered his unistake, and, upon his return from his welding-tour, he rewarded the clerical gentleman with something more substantial.

The Conning Clock.—The astronomical clock which Mr. Corning's munificence has bestowed upon the Albany University is destined to play an important part in railroad matters. It is to be used for the purpose of regulating all the clocks on the Central reilroad, between thicaty and Buffalo. It will do this by the means of a telegraph wire nade expressly for the purpose. The signals may be given meither of two ways. First: They can send over the line a certain number of times a day, so that the error of the clock at each station may be instantly perceived. Or, second: The station clocks can, at small expense be so adjusted that if wrong they will be set precisely right by the automaton action of the astronomical clock, at least lwice a day, and can never vary more from the Albany time than the slation clock gains or loses in the interval between the time-signals.

This arrangement will of course involve considerable onlay and additional annual expense on the part of the trustees of the observatory; but we cannot doubt that the directors of the N Y Central railroad will indemnify them. We hope, indeed, to hear that all railroads in this vicinity will promptly avail themselves of the opportunity which will now be put within their reach of introducing astronomical time. In the State of New York alone there 4,216 mile of railroad on which, during the past year, there were more than 33.000,000 of passengers. All time property and life is in-

In the House to-day, on the resolution declaring Mr. Bank's speaker, Messrs. Dean, Moore, Harrison, and Harris voted, as hereto-tore, against him. On the resolution declaring Mr. Aikin speaker, there was a union of the Democrats and Americans—Barclay and Hickman (Democrats), and — and Cullen (Americans), voting in the negative, and Williams and Wheeler in the affirmative—Aiken having received one more vote than Banks, though a much larger number voted on the Banks than on the Aikin proposition.
